PATTERSON FIRES
WHAT IS TAKEN AS HIS 'OPENING GUN'

Travelers Addressed
By Utility Chief In Tuscaloosa Meet

FIVE MAIN POINTS
ARE EMPHASIZED

Formal Announcement Of Candidacy Is Expected Soon

What is considered by his friends as the opening gun in the coming gubernatorial campaign was issued by Andrew G. Patterson, Albany-Decatur man and at present the head of the Alabama Public Service Commission and Alabama Securities Commission, before the state gathering of the state Travelers Protective Association meeting at Tuscaloosa. Mr. Patterson was well received by the gathered throng as he outlined issues that are believed to be vital in the coming campaign for the governorship of the state.

Mr. Patterson outlined five points in his talk that was intended to draw fire from the positions of other candidates entered in the campaign and those likely to enter. The following principles are advocated by Mr. Patterson:

1. Freedom of the state government in its legislative and administrative departments from the domination or influence of selfish interests; an efficient, progressive government that will actively function in the interest of all the people.

2. Increased appropriations for public education and an equitable distribution of educational funds so as to secure full terms of all public schools and bring the advantages of higher education closer to the masses, thereby reducing the cost.

3. Increased revenue for the state government from the following sources: 1. A severance tax to be levied upon the state's natural resources as they are developed and utilized. 2. Increase of taxes upon railroad properties, at least to the general average collected by other states. 3. Assessment of all personal property upon a fair value basis with no increase upon agricultural lands not producing net incomes.

4. An impartial enforcement of all laws, particularly those relating to prohibition and public safety; restricted exercise of pardon power to serve only purposes of justice and to prevent crime; abolition of the convict lease system and removal of state convicts from the mines.

5. Reorganization of the state highway commission, providing for representation thereon from every section of the state, and for employment of an experienced, capable executive as head of the department; with the highway commissioners serving similarly as directors of banks and other business corporations, receiving only nominal salaries and with the chairman in full charge of construction work and maintenance.

Should Mr. Patterson enter the race, and it seems quite likely that his formal announcement will be made within a very short period of time, there will be two of North Alabama's most prominent men in the field in the personages of Andrew Patterson and A. H. Carmichael of Tusculum.

Mr. Patterson's vigorous address was delivered to an assemblage gathered from every corner of the state and was undoubtedly intended to prepare the way for his announcement.

Mr. Patterson is not likely to find strong opposition in this section of the state where he has been known and entered in business for many years, but the fact that Mr. Carmichael will be entered into the governorship fight is believed to mean a split in the North Alabama vote.

TRIBUTE PAID TO MEMORY OF FIVE

Memorial Services Are Held By Kiwanians
At Cemetery

Tribute to the memory of five members of the Morgan Kiwanis club, who, after useful and worthwhile services to their community, have gone on to their reward, was paid Sunday afternoon at the first of the series of annual memorial services at city cemetery chapel.

A large group of Kiwanians, members of the families of departed members and friends, gathered in the little chapel's drive way for the impressive service. It had been planned to follow the services with decoration of the graves of the deceased members, but the inclement weather made it necessary for President C. W. Mathews to appoint a committee for that purpose.

President Mathews opened the services by outlining the purpose of the meeting, after which Miss Lively rendered a beautiful solo, followed by a short talk by Rev. L. F. Goodwin on the life of Kiwanian William R. Shelton. The speaker told of Mr. Shelton's kindness of character, his decided views on moral questions, but his deference and respect of the opinion of others. The speaker stressed the Kiwanian's fidelity to friendships, his love of truth, his love of his fellow man and his love of God.

J. W. Clopton then spoke of Kiwanian Joseph H. Calvin, declaring Mr. Calvin had been a moral success, a religious success, a business success and a social success. He told of the Kiwanian's business life, his activities in the betterment of his community, his work for the church, and his services in all capacities into which his community and his church called him.

The Misses Tisdale sang a duet, after which E. W. Godbey spoke on the life of Kiwanian James Duncan, describing him as an apostle of life.

Tribute to Dr. Duncan was paid by the speaker because of his many, versatile accomplishments, and his work in worthwhile endeavors. It was fitting that the last public address of Dr. Duncan was before the Kiwanis club, when he spoke at one of the Christmas meetings of the club.

T. M. Dix paid tribute to the memory of Kiwanian Pete Ballas, as a man of generous heart, kind impulses and high ideals. He told of the many benevolences of the departed Kiwanian and declared that never was anyone turned away hungry from his table.

Snively president of Birmingham College, Victor Hanson, Birmingham publisher, Erskine Ramsey and Robert Jemison, of Birmingham, and William F. McDowell of Washington.

and high ideals. He told of the many benevolences of the departed Kiwanian and declared that never was anyone turned away hungry from his table.

S. A. Lynne delivered the closing address of the day, paying tribute to the memory of Kiwanian Dr. W. F. Murray. A solo by Mrs. Frank Morrow closed the program.

Prosecution Indicates
It Will Ask For a
Death Penalty

FAIRMAN GIVEN
SEPARATE TRIAL

Long Time Expected To Be Required To Select Jury

(Associated Press)
CHICAGO, May 18.—William Darling Shepherd went on trial alone today charged with the murder of his millionaire foster son, William McClintock with the prosecution indicating it would ask for the death penalty.

Charles Fairman head of a school of scientists, who was indicted with Shepherd and confessed that he instructed the latter in the administration of typhoid germs and supplied him with cultures believing that Shepherd planned to kill young Billie, was granted a separate trial on motion of State's Attorney Crowe.

The first two veniremen examined for possible jury service were excused by the state, after they had said they had conscientious scruples against capital punishment.

Both sides announced ready for trial when the case was called before Judge Thomas Lynch. Shepherd, himself a lawyer was pale when brought into the prisoner's dock.

Mrs. Julie Shepherd, the defendants wife, hurried forward and kissed her husband.

Court attaches estimated it would range from three days to three weeks to secure 12 jurors.

The courtroom was filled to capacity and anxious spectators waited in the corridors.

I. O. O. F. MEMORIAL SERVICES SUNDAY

Fifty-four Graves Are Decorated At City
Cemetery

Albany and Decatur and Nolan lodges of the I. O. O. F. conducted a memorial service at the city cemetery Sunday afternoon in memory of the members of the order who have passed away.

Rev. James D. Hunter was the principal speaker of the occasion and delivered a particularly strong and appropriate address. A representative body of the three lodges was present.

The order of ceremonies was changed at the last moment owing to a heavy downpour of rain. The graves of fifty-four departed members were decorated by an appointed committee before the regular program was heard.

The ceremony was beautiful in its simplicity and a fitting tribute to those who have traveled over the river. The order will probably adopt the decorating of graves as an annual custom.

Austinville Road
Repair Gratifying

The building of the Austinville roadway from Albany to that town is gratifying to the inhabitants of that section, declared Elmer Bussey, druggist, today, in speaking of the repair work on that highway.

"Although we would like to have an asphalt road, we are very well satisfied with the present repair. There is a great deal of difference in the road at this time and what it has been in the past two or three years," Mr. Bussey said.

The city of Albany construction forces continued their work on the road this morning. The work has progressed past the railroad crossing and will extend to the limits of the city. E. R. Adcock is in charge of the work.

Her Lead Expected To Be Followed By
Other Nations

(Associated Press)
PARIS, May 18.—The Temps said today it understands a definite proposal will be made within 15 days by the French government to the United States and Great Britain for settlement of the war debts.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The Washington government is awaiting with interest some word of the reception accorded in the nine European debtor nations to the new announcement that this country desires to arrange debt finding settlements, without undue delay.

Meanwhile there is speculation as to which will be the first nation to submit a proposal.

France, whose debt to the United States is the largest of the lot, is regarded as the hub of the situation and it is known that officials would welcome an opening move from that quarter.

Recent authorization by the French cabinet of its finance minister to take up the debt problem strengthens belief that contact soon will be made with the American debt commission.

Italy, second largest debtor, would quickly follow the action of France, officials believe, with the seven other powers, Belgium, Rumania, Latvia, Greece, Estonia, Jugo-Slovakia and Checho-Slovakia.

LEMANS, France, May 18.—Finance Minister Joseph Calliaux today accepted the candidacy for the senate from this district offered by the radical party. He will replace Senator Gigon, who offered his resignation, in order to permit the return of the finance minister of parliament.

It is understood that physicians were never able to determine the cause of fatality.

Miners Escape As Bunkhouse Bombed

(Associated Press)
MOUNDSVILLE, West Va., May 18.—An explosion today at the Panama mine of the Ben Franklin coal company, on the outskirts of Moundsville, was believed by police to have disclosed an effort to prevent resumption of operation at the mine, which was closed after a strike was called by the United Mine Workers April 16. The company had planned to resume operations today.

The blast tore a hole in the hillside and damaged a miner's bunkhouse. Ten miners in the bunkhouse escaped injury. Officers declared their belief to be a bomb had been thrown at the fan house and missed its mark.

The Cullman Motor company is one of the most substantial agencies in the territory. It is understood that they will conduct a repair shop in connection.

Demented Negro
Blamed For Crime

(Associated Press)
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 18.—Belief that the same person, probably a demented negro, was responsible for a series of crimes, including the slaying of four women, which has occurred in the past five years in the Fourche bottoms section, near Little Rock, was expressed today by county officials, investigating the killing of Mrs. Maude Fussard, whose mutilated body was discovered yesterday on a railroad trestle in the bottoms.

Mrs. Fussard's body was badly beaten and bore marks and bruises similar to those on the bodies of the other women killed. It is the belief of police officials she was attacked and killed some distance from where the body was found.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., May 18.—Southwick Erion, 35, of Memphis, was killed in a fight with county officers on the outskirts of Hattiesburg early today and his brother-in-law, Wiley S. Brown, also of Memphis, was arrested, charged with having liquor in his possession and having fired on officers.

At the sheriff's office it was announced that 118 quarts of champagne and imported liquor was found in a large automobile in which the men were riding.

Erion was the proprietor of a barber shop and clothes pressing establishment in Memphis.

A deputy sheriff and three constables had been in hiding along an egressing road since midnight, after receiving a tip that an automobile, loaded with liquor had left Gulfport last night.

About 4 a. m. when Erion and Brown stopped to take gasoline at filling station, the officers approached and informed them they had a search warrant for the car.

The officers said Erion shouted to Brown to fire and that Brown blazed away at them, starting a fusillade that was ended when the automobile was driven off by Brown.

Officers lost sight of the men and an hour later Brown drove back to the filling station and telephoned Sheriff Norsworthy to come and get him. On the backseat was the body of Erion.

Herr Stressemann said: "We shall continue to carry out the Dawes plan in the same manner as before. Parliamentary majorities in government might change, but I cannot conceive any administration which would depart from the program and policies we have adopted."

Boys Forced To Drink and Dance

(Associated Press)

PLAN CITY, Fla., May 18—Medical attention today was being administered to seven boys, members of the First Baptist Sunday school, who yesterday were rescued from the swamps around Lake Thonotossa, 15 miles north of Tampa.

Hillsboro county officers remained in the swamp meanwhile, on the trail of three men whom the lads claimed ran them from their camp, after forcing them to drink whiskey and dance at the points of pistols. Physicians attending the youngsters stated this morning that poison contracted from exposure in the water and mire would not prove serious to any member of the party.

The youngsters were sons of prominent citizens of this community. Fred Knight, 12, oldest member of the group, told officers they were forced to flee into the swamp by the unidentified men.

The Blue Circle

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Incapacitated, mentally by shock as a result of experiences during the World War, Renshaw makes a proposition to David Campbell, wealthy, elderly man of leisure, that for a year he assume responsibility for him (Renshaw)—practically "buy" him. Doctor Stanley, life-long friend of Campbell's, indorses the proposition, which Campbell, with some natural misgivings, accepts. The arrangement is that the young man becomes an inmate of the Campbell household, with the nominal duty of secretary. Renshaw meets Verity, Campbell's granddaughter, during the night, and she does not like him. Jenks, the butler, Renshaw also feels, is distinctly hostile.

CHAPTER II.—At dinner, a guest, referred to as Madame Hvoeslef, is not present. Renshaw has a feeling that the servants are spying on him. Jenks warns him that there are "queer things" going on in the house. That night he is disturbed by the appearance on the wall of his room of a small blue circle of light. Mysterious noises in the corridor outside his door cause him to investigate, but he discovers nothing unusual.

CHAPTER III.—Campbell tells Renshaw that the household is in some respects "unusual," but makes light of his story of the mysterious sounds. Renshaw meets Madame Hvoeslef, a foreigner, with an air of mystery.

CHAPTER IV.—Madame Hvoeslef asks Renshaw to go to New York, a short journey, on a mission for her next day. During the night the blue circle again appears and the mysterious noises are resumed. Arising to investigate, Renshaw discovers he is locked in. He hears the sound of a heavy body dragging itself up to the transom over the door. Then a hand appears, apparently seeking to open the transom. Unsuccessful, the hand vanishes, and Renshaw hears the sound of a heavy body crawling away.

CHAPTER V.—Remembering Jenks' warning, Renshaw tells the butler of the mysterious noises, but gets no satisfaction. Madame Hvoeslef gives him a handbag, declaring its contents are priceless, which he is to deliver to a Mr. Atkins in New York. After dressing, Renshaw again finds his door locked, but it is promptly opened by Jenks. Renshaw delivers the bag. Hart, Campbell's chauffeur, who drove him to town, tells him Verity and Madame Hvoeslef are at the Waldorf. Remembering his locked door that morning Renshaw is vaguely uneasy about the handbag, and calls up Atkins. He learns that the bag he delivered contained only blank paper.

CHAPTER VI.—Meeting the ladies at the Waldorf, Renshaw learns that Madame Hvoeslef's property is safe, the bag he delivered being a duplicate, for which no explanation can be made. Hart gets permission to stay in town that night, producing a substitute chauffeur. On the way home Renshaw sends back the substitute, taking the wheel himself.

CHAPTER VII.—Despite her indifference Renshaw feels himself becoming deeply interested in Verity. During the night he is awakened by a girl, who tells him her grandfather has had an accident and is unconscious. They get the old man to bed. Restored to consciousness he with difficulty conveys to Renshaw a message, "Watch! Take charge."

CHAPTER VIII.—Verity is annoyed at her grandfather placing Renshaw in charge, but they reach an amicable understanding. Verity being impressed by Renshaw's masterful handling of the situation.

CHAPTER IX.—Doctor Stanley visits Campbell, and departs, leaving the local doctor, Morris, in charge. Stanley makes light of the mysterious episodes, as Renshaw describes them. He tells the secretary Madame Hvoeslef's property in the handbag was her memoirs, which she feared might be stolen.

designed to draw out and keep her talking. He was again working on the lock, feebly assisted by the last hairpin.

"Yes; I was born in my own bedroom—in the one I have had ever since."

There was a quality in her voice that seriously disturbed him. He whirled toward her quickly.

"Come out of that corner now," he directed. "You'll be better here by the door."

"How much air do you suppose there is in this closet?"

He laughed. "So that's what's worrying you? Well, there's plenty—all we can possibly need."

"Are you sure? It seems to me to be getting close."

"That's because you are nervous and thinking about air and imagining things."

"And it's not—really close?"

"Not a bit of it. I'll figure out our air supply in cubic feet, if you like."

She laughed a little in the sudden relief born of the words. "That wouldn't mean anything to me," she confessed. "I know less about mathematics than anyone you ever met. I shall never forget how horrified grandfather was when he discovered, a few years ago, that I couldn't even figure up my income."

"Have you ever bent your intellect on your income tax?"

Renshaw did not care what they talked about, as long as they talked. He wished to occupy the girl's mind, but he did not care to talk about anything that would occupy his own mind. He wanted to think; if he could. For Verity Campbell was quite right about the atmosphere in that closet. The infernal place was almost air-tight. They would be all right for a time, of course; but in the interval he must not be wearing himself out against the door, and gulping in all the air there was in his subsequent exhaustion.

"No; grandfather's lawyer attends to all that for us." Verity's voice returned to the note that had startled him. "How long do you think we have been in here now?"

"Not more than half an hour, I should say."

"It seems a century." Her next words showed that her thoughts were taking the direction in which Renshaw's had turned at once. "They won't be apt to miss us till dinner-time," she said slowly. "They will look for us then. But they may think it is natural for us not to come to tea today, with the house so upset; and dinner is hours off. Mr. Renshaw—her voice took on a note of barely controlled hysteria—"I know it's very hard for you, with me here on your hands. I don't want to make it harder. But—I am horribly frightened." The last words came out with a deep gasp.

"I know. It's awfully unpleasant for you." Again she was conscious that he was speaking to her as he would have spoken to Wee-wee. "I wish there were something I could do. But we'll just have to be patient till they hear us. In the meantime there's nothing, absolutely nothing, to be afraid of. Now I'll go on trying to rouse the household."

He acted on the resolution even as he spoke; and Verity's reply, if she made any, was lost in the persistent rhythm of the terrible double tattoo he kept up. After a long time he felt her light touch on his arm.

"I'm afraid I can't stand any more of it just now," she almost whispered. "Then we'll talk a while. Sit down on the floor; you must be tired."

"No, I'm not tired. But—Mr. Renshaw—I'm perfectly sure the air is close."

"That's natural enough. We are in a small place."

Renshaw himself would gladly have ceased breathing at that moment, but to do so would certainly have alarmed instead of helping the girl.

"If you will sit down you will find the air better," he contented himself with saying.

"That's why you wanted me to sit down, isn't it?" she asked dully. "It's very good of you—but I won't sit down."

"Your imagination is working overtime. Let me tell you a little experience of my own that shows what one's imagination can do."

Renshaw's voice was too careless now. He was overdoing the pose of the indifferent raconteur. But his companion, who would have realized this half an hour earlier, was past such distinctions now.

"I was on a steamer one night, cruising in a tropical sea," he began, keeping up a list tattoo as a running accompaniment to his reminiscence. "It was a stormy night, and I woke up with the feeling that I was suffocating. There was a big sea running, and the stewards had locked down both my stateroom windows. I noticed that when I came in. I had meant to open the windows after I turned off the light, but I forgot to do it."

He was not sure she was listening, but he felt her growing terror. She was past any comfort that lay in idle chatter. Nevertheless he went on:

"I got up and tried to turn on the light, but the switch didn't work. I fumbled at one of the windows, but couldn't find the catch. I had never in my life felt such a horrible sense of oppression. In groping around my hand touched a heavy military brush, and in desperation I finally picked up that brush and drove it straight through a window. There was a tremendous crash, of course, and a lot of flying glass, but no one heard the noise, because of the storm."

He was not sure that she was even listening. Instead, he was listening

12 Years Ago TODAY

From The Daily of
May 18, 1913

May 18 falling on Sunday there was no issue of the Daily of that date.

A DAILY PRAYER—We pray Thee that we may desire to be lifted to the Light of life and into the Heaven of our best desires.

Summer is here and with it the greatest development in the Tennessee Valley since the first Muscle Shoals boom was started.

That man may be down but not out is further demonstrated. Earl Sande won the Kentucky Derby with apparent ease.

Some people are never satisfied. Give them the best that there is and they still want more. We notice that the coal miners are preparing for another blow at capital, but what for, is still to be determined.

The Valley of the Southland is awakening at last. In our own cities, in neighboring cities and our own state rumblings of development so long awaited in the Valley section are now being heard. Albany-Decatur is to be one of the greatest of builders through the next two years.

Witness the amount of improvements by corporations, investments of private capital, new construction work, newly paved streets in Albany-Decatur in the past few months. Think of the plans for the future of the summer and fall months. Can you not see that the future that has been dreamed of for many years is nearly realized?

Do you realize that within the next two months that between 300 and 500 men will be employed by the state highway department and the Southern railway in this immediate section. The improvements of the Southern will extend over a twelve month period while it is estimated that the Tennessee River bridge will be under construction for the next two years.

Four roadways are being repaired and built in this section this summer too. The Moulton, the Athens-Huntsville, the Courtland, and the Athens-Ardmore highways are placed on the summer schedule of the state highway department. That means that a great many more men will be employed in this territory.

Sleep walking has received another jolt. Man in New York was locked up on a charge of sleep walking in connection with petty larceny. A merchant who is a constant sleep walker in his every day business life will not receive a jail sentence, he doesn't need one, he locks himself in. The man who is not awake to the possibilities of the day is sentencing himself to failure.

Two victories have been added to the list won by the civilized world lately. The French are busy winding up the Riff offensive, the United States Coast Guard has already scattered the rum fleet. Only ten ships remain on run row of the formidable armada that once stood out against the mandates of the United States. There is a significance to the victory won in that crime, disorder and rioting have again been rewarded as they always have been.

There will be some meeting in Tennessee when Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryan are arrayed on opposite sides of the evolution question. Darrow isn't attempting to prove the evolution theory, he is merely demonstrating his ability at locating technicalities in law. It is too bad that a man with a great mentality must use his time defending criminals who are known to be guilty and in attempting to tear down man-made statutes, no matter how narrow, designed to protect the teachings of the Bible.

MEMORIAL SERVICES

The many orders, fraternal and civic, of these cities have been carrying out a most beautiful thought during the past few Sunday afternoons. The living members of these various organizations have been thoughtful of those gone to a better land, those who have served on this earth to the best of their ability and at last have claimed their place in eternity. This world is often human when the beings who inhabit it stop for a moment in the mad rush of things and consider in their own hearts, the goodness that lives there.

STATE ASKING FOR DEATH PENALTY

The state is asking for the death penalty in the case of William D. Shepherd who is charged with having administered typhoid germs to young William McClintock with a motive declared to be none other than the gain of the young man's fortune.

Should it be found that Shepherd is guilty as charged then let us hope that Chicago courts will not set another Leopold-Loeb record. Shepherd, if found guilty of the charge, should be given the full penalty of the law—death. He should be made to pay for the life of young McClintock with his own life.

Such cases in American crime annals should be dealt with according to American justice, American beliefs. Shepherd, if guilty, has been the perpetrator of one of the most horrible crimes in history. The death penalty is justifiable.

IS UNDERWOOD TO RETIRE?

Oscar W. Underwood is apparently sleeping at the political switch at the present time. It is rumored that he is through in public life. Some rumors have it that he has been in ill health causing him to withdraw from the political ranks, others have it that he is to enter other fields. Whatever is correct it is known that Underwood's candidacy has been kept quiet and it is not ascertained what his next step will be.

Underwood has been a man of convictions since holding a seat in the United States Senate. His actions have at times caused harsh criticism particularly in this section for many have felt that Mr. Underwood has had an opportunity to serve the Shoals people and has failed at the crucial moment. That may or may not be true—it is doubtful if the real status of the case will ever be known.

There is one thing about Oscar Underwood that has stood out since he was elected as an Alabama Senator. He has been a leader in the United States Senate. Everyone in this nation has known of Oscar Underwood of Alabama, a man who has played a vast part in the history of the nation since the Wilson administration. He has stood out in the Senate even to having been chosen as a possible Democratic standard bearer.

He has been a big man in the Senate affairs, he has been a big man in Alabama and unless he does retire from the political limelight it is doubtful if any other would be able to succeed him. He has a tremendous following no matter what the criticism has been against him.

AFTER GRADUATION—WHAT?

The day is not far away now when the realization of a long, long dream of youth will come into being. Graduation Day is near at the Albany and Decatur high schools. The goal is near after years of seeming hard toil and the reward for service and study is in the form of a diploma showing that the boy or girl has gained recognition through study, through conduct, and through application.

That boy and that girl will feel like a king or a queen upon the night the diplomas are awarded and a stirring address is delivered by some distinguished personage, but there is a "morning after." Like every good thing there must be an end. The night before they stood at the top of the world and gazed down upon the little beings that go to make up the globe, the morning after they wonder if all the ideals of which they dream are really to be found in the world. They have descended from the throne to the position of the lowest of subjects in the business world. What is the next step; are they to continue to climb up the ladder of life, are they to be encouraged on their way to higher things?

That is a matter that is to be determined largely by the grit and the determination of the boy or the girl and it is a matter in which the merchant, the physician, the housewife, the citizen all have a definite part. There are some boys and girls who need no incentive, they will strive to attain the heights because there is something inside them that makes them mount obstacles. The majority of students leaving high school will need direction, encouragement, and opportunity. It is up to the people who have made the start to give it to them. Do not allow them to go out into the world without some aid of some kind. If they ask for advice, give it to them, if their record merits a position and you have one open give them a chance to show the stuff they are made of. Do not allow them to face the world of stern reality all alone—the fall is too great from the heights of senior at high school to John Smith, Esq., in every day business life. They are a definite part of these cities—they should be given a chance here first. Make them feel that their cities are proud to claim them and will aid them wherever it is possible.

BANNING LITERATURE

News dispatches a few days ago told of the banning of certain magazines on Washington news stand. The press dispatches did not tell the names of the various magazines. It was further stated that the order to ban the selling of these publications was not by statute, but more by request than any thing else.

Now this movement is indeed significant. For many months the more wholesome magazines have had to face the competition of magazines full of filth, published under the guise of art and physical beauty. The cleaner type of periodical has no doubt suffered and the newspapers have come to their aid generally in an effort to stop the printing of such literature.

The movement in Washington may not yet be declared lawful and it may be that the news stands will be allowed to continue the sale of the literature but the movement has at least started. Censorship is in sight and when censorship is given the power to act, then this class of literature will be thrown into the streets.

Much like the case of Rum Row, cut off the demand and it will soon be found that there is no supply.

There is no need for such publications with material that easily disturbs the youthful mind and a great many of the older ones, stirring up a desire for the vulgar and filthy. That should not be the mission of any publication whether it be a magazine or newspaper.

Take the stories that are published about the lives of others, soiled lives, souls dragged through the mire. Now these stories go under the guise of "warnings" to others who may be left open to circumstance or chance, that they may know how to act under such conditions. The human mind does not grasp these stories in any such light, the appeal to the lower animal instinct is too great. This day and time there are pastors and professors and moral upright people who have chosen the mission of warning the world. They are living that example and they are not forced to resort to such means to arouse others against the dangers of bad living.

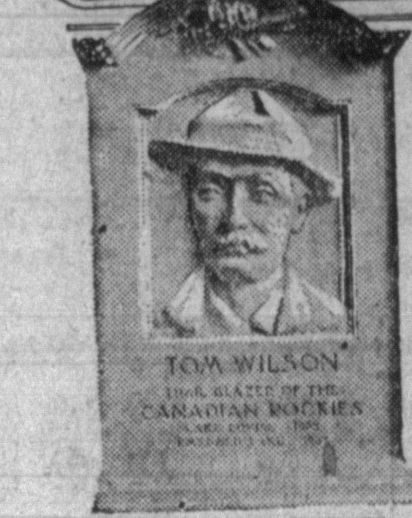

We do not need such publications, we never have, the modern era does not demand it unless it is from the standpoint of a love for the sordid and the filthy. The sooner such publications are barred, the sooner will the thoughts of those who read them be bettered. Human beings will never get away from thought of the vulgar, it is a temptation that is put here for people to resist, we see it enacted in everyday life. We know that it is here and for that reason we need no publication or person to stir it to life. It was once said that because a garbage can stood in the back of the house that there was no need for sticking the nose in it to know that it was there. The same may be applied to the publication of so-called stories of life, "warnings," art in the nude, physical perfection of man and woman. We know that very well, generations before us have known it and generations after will know it without the aid of any publication to tell us that it is there.

The step of the Washington forces is indeed a good step the nation should stand behind such a move.

Riding in Canadian Rockies: A Growing Summer Diversion

TRAIL RIDERS HONORING TOM WILSON

Albert H. MacCarthy, will return in time to report to the Alpine Club. Lake O'Hara has been painted by the late John Singer Sargent, and by Carl Kungus and Richard M. Kimbel, the two latter are New York artists and members of the artist colony that summers at Banff. Lake O'Hara threatens to rival Lake Louise whose close neighbor it is.

The Alpine Club's main objective this year is to climb Mt. Goodwin, the highest peak visible from the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the ascent will be made from a sub-camp.

Last year's initial Pow-Wow of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies was held in Yoho Valley near Field, B. C. Two days of trail riding and social gathering in a big lodge in the evening were enjoyed by more than 200 members and non-members, the latter qualifying for membership, one of the requirements of which is to have ridden fifty miles over Canadian Rockies trail. Dr. Charles D. Walcott of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., is the honorary president of the Trail Riders' order.

Several hundred trail riders are expected to take part in this year's meeting, which will be held Aug. 8-10 inclusive. The start will be from Banff and Lake Louise by motor to Marble Canyon where the horses and guides will be in waiting for the three days' ride.

gram is as follows: first night, tent camp on Goodwin Plateau, 6,500 feet above the valley; second night, tent camp on the shore of Lake O'Hara, rivaling Lake Louise in beauty, but a wilder type; third night, Tipti Camp beside Lake Wapta and Pow-Wow held in Sun Dance Lodge. There will be a sing-song each night in camp.

Riders must bring either a sleeping bag or two warm blankets. A change of underwear and warm coat or mackinaw for the hours around the camp fire, is all the equipment that is necessary. No horse for each three riders. A word of caution, unless one is prepared to rough it he should not ride; but if one delights in the feel of a saddle and pony, he, or she, may be a Trail Rider.

The Rocky Mountains Guide Association, an organization of all the guides in this territory, with headquarters at Banff, is looking after the arrangements for horses and guides.

YOUR HEALTH

Why Fresh, Clean Offices Bring More Dollars

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

TWO or three years ago I told you about a judge who gave attention to the sanitation of his court room. A few days ago I happened to be in court when this same judge presided.

As soon as he was seated he made a survey of the room. Then he called an attendant and directed that the shades be thrown up to let in the sunshine. Two windows were opened to admit a stranger to most court rooms—pure air.

I wish there were some way to get fresh air into every public office and hall. It is a shame how stuffy and airless most of these places are. It seems to be the rule that public gathering places are neglected and rarely subjected to the rules of hygiene.

The study of the law begins with a consideration of the "natural laws." Of all men, however, lawyers seem less concerned about sanitation than almost all other classes of society. Dingy, smoky, dusty offices are the rule.

I can understand that a busy man, studying many books and endless papers, does not want them disturbed when he goes home at night or out for a hasty lunch. He wants to find everything exactly where he left it.

Most legal clients are men, I suppose. The presence of the women is needed to guarantee cleanliness and neatness.

Of course, there are notable exceptions. I have been in law offices neat as a pin. Likewise, I have been in medical offices, which should be scrupulously clean by reason of the teachings of the professions, which are a disgrace to all the doctors of hygiene.

Clean hands and a clean place to work, kept fresh by pure air and sunlight—these practices will add years to your life. More than this, such a life is bound to be more efficient and productive.

I mean actually that in dollars and cents cleanliness will add to your riches. Dirt is an encumbrance and an obstacle to progress of every sort.

I wish you could meet my friend the Judge. He isn't handsome, but for all that he is good to look at. His freshness of spirit, his good nature, his tact and energy—these make him a joy forever.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

"One of the most interesting of the graduation recitals given by the seniors in the Williams School of Expression was heard yesterday afternoon when Lulu Garnett of Decatur, Alabama, gave a monologue reading of "The Prince Chap," by Edward Tople, in the Little Theatre.

"The monologue, which is exceptionally interesting, is divided into three parts and Miss Garnett displayed splendid narrative ability in preserving the continuity throughout.

"The characters are very human and their naturalness was retained by the reader, whose transition from one to another was smooth and definite.

Miss Garnett has a delightful stage presence, is well poised and graceful, apparently possessing all the qualities necessary for a successful career as an interpretative reader."—Ithaca News-Journal.

Unwritten Law Her Defense

OLYMPIA MACRI, WIFE

Beneath the technical defense presented for Miss Olympia Macri during her New Haven, Conn., trial for the murder of John Bagnano, "The Sheik," was a mother's plea to have her baby given the name of its alleged father. She shot Bagnano, who was married to another, when he denied the child's paternity.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of twenty-three and work in a large office with several girls and men. A client of ours has requested to be introduced to me. Our salesman knows him well and says he is a nice young man. I have met him and like him very much, but do not know whether I should continue our acquaintanceship, as I do not want to cause any gossip in the office. Please advise me what you think. BLUE-EYED CURLS.

ARE interested in this young man and would like to know him better, don't worry about gossip, my dear. As long as your social life does not in any way interfere with your work, your employers will not object.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl twenty-three years of age, and I care for a man of the same age. I think he also likes me, but not as much as I should like him to. Please tell me how I may win this man's affections. SANDY.

SANDY: There is no way of forcing love, my dear. If this young man is sufficiently interested in you to invite you out and to accept your invitations, you must realize that he values your friendship. For the rest you must resign yourself to patient waiting.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl seventeen years of age. I go with a young man who seems to like me very much. Some of my friends tell me they see him at dances and parties with another girl. What can I do to stop it? DUCKY.

DUCKY: "Stop it!" My dear, you have not this privilege. Remember that you are not engaged to marry this young man and, at, consequently, he can meet as many friends as he chooses without violating the conventions. Don't you really think your attitude toward this young man is unfair, my dear? You have the privilege of accepting the invitations extended by your other friends, so you must not expect him to limit his friendships. There will be lots of time for that when you are engaged.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: Should a young man greet a lady on the street, or should the lady greet him first? WALTER.

WALTER: The young lady should acknowledge the young man first.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

WILLIAM BOWS AFFABLY TO CHILDREN OF DOORN

AMSTERDAM—A picture of William Hohenzollern, one time German emperor, dressing in the latest fashion and seeking to win the good-will of the children of Doorn, is given by a Dutch journalist, Barteld H. Ibelings, who recently visited Doorn castle.

Another pastime of the former emperor is collecting photographs of the Prince of Wales, and he is also fond of cutting and pasting up pictures of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland. He dresses most carefully, says Mr. Ibelings, and his suits are always of the latest cut. At the court which William continues to hold, the same stiff ceremonial as obtained in Berlin days is observed.

One of the former emperor's chief ambitions is to become popular with the people, and especially the young folk of Doorn. He therefore often goes out personally to shop and addresses the townfolk in their native Dutch dialect. He even deigns now to tip his hat pleasantly in greeting, whereas formerly he had everybody bowing to him.

The newspaper is the shop window of every housewife. Advertising is a necessity to the merchant and tradesman who wishes to be before the housewives of the community.

At "Richest Girl's" Wedding

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, (ENTERING CAR)

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., journeyed down from his Tarrytown estate to attend the wedding of his granddaughter, Abby Rockefeller, in the New York home of her father, John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The aged oil magnate enjoyed the simple ceremony, and was said to have chuckled when told Abby had ordered the words "serve" and "obey" deleted from the ritual. Called the richest heiress in the world, she married a comparatively poor young law clerk, David Meriwether Milton.

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE; Mlle. KOLLONTAY; BRIGADIER-GENERAL BUTLER; WILLIAM LORIMER

Roscoe Arbuckle, once popular film comedian, planned, after innumerable delays, finally to wed Doris Deane, in Los Angeles, as the first step to starting a new life. Mme. Alexandra Kollontay, Soviet minister at Oslo, Norway, and known as the only woman minister in the world, left suddenly for London, en route to Moscow leaving behind her vague rumors of intrigue, in which she was said to have been involved. Brigadier-General Smedley D. Butler, Philadelphia commissioner of public safety, suspended 400 policemen, after an investigation allegedly disclosed a great booze-running plot. William Lorimer, once United States Senator from Illinois, deposed because of irregularities and involved in a bank's collapse, planned a political come-back this summer, according to his friends.

A Hint for Beginners

The cross-word puzzle diagram is merely a means of concealing words which are synonymous to those listed and which will interlock perfectly and so read equally well crosswise or downwards. Always look for the number of the synonym on the diagram. If horizontal, you must find a word to fit between that number and the first shaded stop to the right; if vertical, you must fit your word between the number and the first shaded stop below.

Dutch Shippers Look Forward To Better Business in Europe

ROTTERDAM, Holland—A slow cleaning of the international European horizon, coupled with a gradual stabilization of exchange rates and prospects of the execution of the Dawes plan enhancing the buying power of central European nations, rae mentioned as favorable factors for this year in the annual report of the Netherlands Shipowners Federation, which controls 656 vessels, or 97 1-2 percent of the entire Dutch merchant marine. For the present, however, the conditions of the freight market imposes extreme economy, says the report, which points out that foreign competition remains exceedingly keen. Dutch, American and English rates of pay for seamen, according to the report, are the highest in the world. They are double the German or Italian rates, and this explains why ships sold to the latter countries because they cannot be made to pay at home, can be run at a good profit by their new owners.

AMUSEMENTS

Hollywood which for years has been accustomed to seeing movie actors and actresses in queer costumes and queerer make-ups wandering through its boulevards; which has turned over its finest residences and buildings when movie producers needed them for certain scenes, may soon be unable to find a single scene being taken in public.

Not that the movies are leaving Hollywood. But many producers are beginning to realize that better results can be obtained if all of the picture is filmed outside the studio, even if it is necessary to build a number of street scenes and buildings.

During the filming of "Madonna of the Streets," which will be the first National picture at the Princess theater today, Edwin Carewe did not leave the studio for a single location. Every scene was filmed at the United Studios. Even when it was necessary to take a scene showing the interior of a London mission house holding a thousand people Carewe preferred to build the set in the studio rather than use one of Hollywood's halls, which at best would be a poor imitation of the typically English structure which the story called for.

In "Madonna of the Streets" Milton Sills is cast as a mission worker Nazimova, famous Russian actress, re-enters motion pictures after a two years' absence and is featured in this picture with Mr. Sills.

Barons Feature In Southern Race; Macks Two Full Games In The Lead

The rise of the Baronial hosts in the Southern circuit through the past week has caused quite a stir in the Dixie family circle, particularly in Atlanta and Chattanooga. Both the latter clubs were traveling toward serenely when the Baronial cloud fell upon them, they immediately did a tumbling act toward the second division of the loop.

The Baronial spurt can be attributed to the heavy hitting of the Baron contingent. The hurlers still remain in the mediocre class although Lundgren gave a pretty exhibition at Chattanooga, allowing the Noogans but three hits. The trio of safeties came at the same time and the Noogans won an unmerited 2-1 victory.

In the past week Birmingham won five of six starts and jumped from the second division to a tie for first place. This morning the Barons are relegated to third place, having dropped a contest to Chattanooga on Sunday. The race is one of the closest in years. A team may win one day and go to the top, lose the next game and fall into the second division heap.

Connie Mack's club is traveling a terrific pace. The Washington Senators are traveling just as fast, but the Mack outfit has the edge and is maintaining a two full game lead. They dropped no conflicts during the past week while engaging in five turnouts. The Senatorial ship of state sailed into opponents for five wins and two defeats. The battle continues to rage with the Senators sending broadsides into Tris Speaker's Indians.

The Macks have won twenty of their 25 starts this season. The early season spurt may mean a great advantage to the Macks in the latter days of the season. A club with a commanding lead is a hard nut to crack in the last days of the year when some clubs are cleaning up and the rest are slumping. The Macks do not seem due for a slump at the present time while critics believe that the Washington club is due for a severe set-back.

DECATUR WINS FIRST GAME OF CITY SEASON

Decatur turned in a good card against the Louisville and Nashville shophmen Saturday afternoon at Malone park when a ninth inning rally resulted in a victory for the Decaturites.

Gustin assumed mound duties for the afternoon and although showing signs of lack of practice promises to be one of the mainstays of the season of the Decatur hill artists.

Meyers hurled for the L. & N. and after a disastrous first inning settled down until the ninth when the Decatur club came from behind and nabbed the encounter.

The win placed the Saints of the Consolidated Sunday schools and the Decatur team in a tie for second place honors.

The score by innings:
L. & N. 150 000 200-8
Decatur 402 000 102-9

JUNIOR "Y" WINS
Hartselle Midgets in baseball invaded Albany Friday afternoon and to their sorrow, where trimmed by the Junior Y. M. C. A., score ending in 14 to 4.

This ties these two teams as the Junior Y. M. C. A. received a defeat at the hands of the Midgets at Hartselle the other day.

Tuesday the Junior Y. M. C. A. will invade Hartselle and play off the tie.

DECORAS LEAD

Below are given the scores in bowling of the last two matches at the Y. M. C. A. The result of these two matches again places the Decoras in the winning line for bowling trophy.

Bear Cats and Decoras now stand tied for first place in the 10 pin bowling tournament on at the Y. M. C. A., with another match looming Monday night between the "Y" Dormitory and "Y" Directors. Should the Dormitory take four points Monday they too will be tied for first place. In that event an elimination contest will be staged this week between the teams tied in order to determine the winner.

HOUSES OF STEEL AND CORK

AN EXPERIMENT IN ENGLAND
DEAL—Not far from the famous Deal Castle, built by Henry VIII, several workmen's houses of cork with steel framework, are being built as an experiment designed to assist in relieving the housing shortage in England.

The entire skeleton of the newly conceived houses is of steel and the insulation core of the walls is formed of slabs of compressed cork. On the exterior the cork is enclosed in solid concrete to the depth of an inch and a half by a "cement gun," which applies the concrete under pressure. The cork itself, having been pressed into a mold will not swell and burns very slowly. Calculations of the builders show that its insulation value saved 25 percent in heating costs.

Another advantage for the cork house claimed by the inventors is that it is claimed by the inventors is that it is sound-proof in comparison with the ordinary structure of brick, stone or timber. Owing to the fact that it may be built by unskilled labor under direction of experienced hands the cost is low and the authorities hope buildings of this kind may prove popular among the coal miners and other workmen in the industrial districts.

BANK OF HUMAN KINDNESS COMPELLED TO SUSPEND

SEATTLE.—Moved by the desire to help needy and worthy prisoners, William Pigott, a philanthropic local manufacturer, put up $500 a few months ago to aid the down and out. The money was to be loaned only on the security of "human nature," a promise to pay within 30 days, and its disbursement was entirely in the hands of Justice of the Peace, C. C. Dalton.

Prisoners brought before the judge were advanced sums ranging from $2 to $20. The $500 was in due course drawn on heavily, but only one loan for $2, has been repaid. Two other debtors came back and asked for more time, but all the others vanished quickly. The judge and the philanthropist, somewhat more cynical, have suspended disbursements, at least temporarily.

The advances were confined to prisoners released by the court or dis-

Local employees of the Alabama Power company and representative of the Birmingham Stove and Range company enjoyed a luncheon at the Lyons Hotel at noon today. The luncheon was a get-together affair for the purpose of preparing plan for a sales campaign being conducted this month over the state.

"I wouldn't have believed it," said Judge Dalton recently. "It looks like a fine idea, helping the lowly retrieving lost souls and all that sort of thing. But, hang it all, the soul won't be saved, and so we've got to have what's left of the bank."
